Southerners Told to Obey Rights Law

By W. B. RAGSDALE JR.
WASHINGTON (AP) — Southern senators, who lost a long and bitter battle against the civil rights bill, are closing ranks again to urge that Southerners obey the new law "for as long as it is there."

At least a dozen of the Democratic senators who fought hardest against the measure during a 15-week battle in the Senate have urged Dixie to limit its protests to court challenges and to avoid all violence, however much the law may be disliked.

Some have spoken out in statements and speeches in their home areas. Others said much the same when asked for comment on a speech by Sen. Richard B. Russell, D-Ga., who led their Senate fight.

Russell, addressing an area development commission at Rome, Ga., urged that the new law be observed as long as it is the law.

"Violence and law violation will only compound our difficulties and increase our troubles," he said. "All good citizens will learn to live with the statute and abide by its final adjudication even though we reserve the right to continue to fight."

Convicted Wife Slayer Is Released

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Convicted of slaying his wife, in one of the nation's most sensational murder cases, Dr. Samuel Sheppard has won his 10th case from Ohio Penitentiary after nearly 10 years of trying. But the former osteopath, only months away from a possible parole, appears to have another battle coming up for even temporary freedom before a new trial.

U. S. Dist. Judge Carl A. Weinman in Dayton ruled Wednesday that the 40-year-old Bay Village suburbanite was denied his constitutional rights in 1954 trial in Cleveland. The trial resulted in his conviction in the bludgeoning slaying of Marilyn Sheppard.

Judge Weinman said Sheppard's custody is "void" and if Cuyahoga County or the state takes no action within 60 days the release becomes final.

Weinman's 86-page decision denounced the coverage given the case by three Cleveland newspapers and also mentioned three nationally known radio commentators and columnists.

The judge, acting on a request for a writ of habeas corpus, ordered Sheppard's release under $10,000 bond.

Cuyahoga County (Cleveland) Prosecutor John Corrigan, who handled the state's case in the trial 10 years ago, said he will ask for a stay of execution to prevent Sheppard's release. Ohio Atty. Gen. William Saxbe said the decision would be appealed.

"The state law says no one indicted for first-degree murder may be admitted to bail," Corrigan said in Cleveland. Sheppard was indicted on a first-degree murder charge but was found guilty Dec. 21, 1954, of murder in the second degree. He was sentenced to life but is eligible for parole this fall. Sheppard always has contended a "bushy-haired intruder" killed his wife the night of July 4, 1954.

Sheppard, according to the federal court, would be freed when he posts the $10,000 bond in Cleveland. Then a new trial would be set.

Weinman said Sheppard's constitutional rights were violated by these actions:

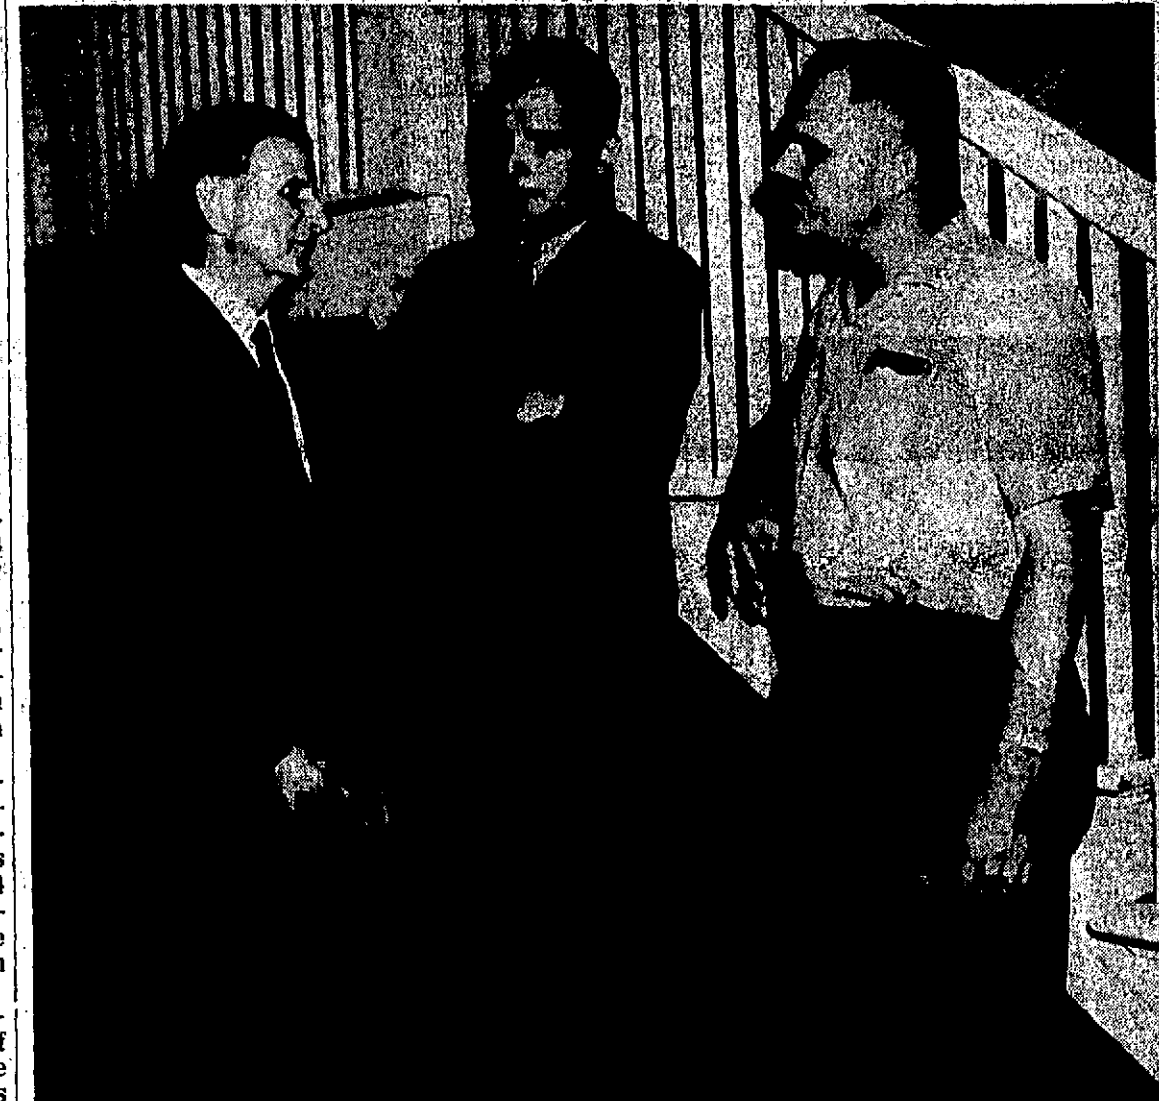

1. Failure of the trial judge to grant a change of venue for a continuance due to the great amount of publicity.
2. Inability of maintaining impartial jurors.
3. Failure of trial Judge Edward Blythin, now dead, to maintain impartiality.
4. Improper introduction of lie detector evidence at the trial.
5. Unauthorized communications to the jury during deliberations.

Super Americans Are Ones in TV Commercials — They Live a Veritable Wonderland

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP) — There are days when I would like to be one of the super Americans.

The super Americans are the people you see pictured in television commercials and magazine advertising.

The world they dwell in is not the world I live in. It is a far, far better world. It is a veritable wonderland.

The thing that makes the world of the super Americans superior to the commonplace world you and I inhabit is that, when they have a problem, some kindly person tells them of a product to buy that will solve it, and they live happily forever and ever.

I have been watching the wonderful world of the super Americans on television for some years now, and here are a few of my favorite characters:

The guy taking a shower with a new kind of soap and looking so happy you feel sure there must be a mermaid tickling his feet.

The freckle-faced kid who brushes his teeth with a toothpaste that saves him from 34 per cent of the cavities that fall to the dumber kids.

The fellow who finds a friendly neighborhood banker who shows him how to borrow money for a new car for $243 less than it would cost if he printed the money in his basement. The girl who bulges like an elephant, but when she puts on a $5.95 girdle immediately turns into a gazelle.

The lean fellow on horseback who gets such deep masculine pleasure out of his cigarettes—and never, never breaks into a hacking smoker's cough.

The rollicking lads with the big foamie steins of beer, who go on endlessly drinking in a bar where the waiter never seems to bring a bill.

The comfortable housewives who get a new lease on life every time they find a new can of something that will take the stain out of their kitchen sink, or a box of something else that magically makes their laundry whiter than white.

Such are the super Americans, and the happy world in which they flourish—a world in which every problem there is a ready and available solution. All you have to do is buy a certain product—and usually it costs "only a few cents more" at most.

Some people knock this world of the super Americans. They say it is merely a souped-up fairyland of advertising illusion. But not me. All I know is that it is a far better world than the glum one I wade through day after day, and the people in it are more joyous and carefree.

GENEVA (AP) — The Soviet Union proposed today that the United States and the Soviet Union agree in principle to the phased destruction of all their bombs as a step toward world disarmament.

Soviet negotiator, Semyon K. ## Europe and Communists Dislike Barry

LONDON (AP) — The nomination of Sen. Barry Goldwater aroused editorial apprehension in Britain and most of Europe today.

Government officials refrained from public comment, but newspapers in general described the choice of the Arizona senator as a victory for the forces of reaction and a threat to world peace.

Bitterest of all, predictably, was the Communist press.

Pravda, the organ of the Soviet Communist party, said Goldwater was running on the "most reactionary, bellicose and adventurist pre-election platform in American history."

There were hard words for the GOP standard-bearer from anti-Communist journals of Western Europe as well.

Stockholm's liberal Expressen, the biggest daily in Scandinavia, described the nomination as "a catastrophe for the Republicans, a threat against the United States, a danger to the world."

Copenhagen's liberal Ekstra-Bladet assented:

"The blackest reaction won the battle in the Cow Palace. The progressive forces that have ruled in the Republican party since 1940 were trampled down under hooves this morning."

Cassandra, columnist of Britain's 5-million-circulation pro-Labor Daily Mirror wrote from the Cow Palace:

"The corpse of much that is decent and wise and tolerant in American society is in the coffin, although the lid has not yet been finally screwed down."

A contrary view of Goldwater—and a forecast that he could win the presidency—came from the independent London Evening Standard's Jean Campbell, who also disagreed with most of her British colleagues.

"For the first time in 34 years the Republican party has fallen into the hands of the conservatives, the natural and healthy opposition for the liberal Democrats," she wrote from the Cow Palace.

"You have only to sit in this crazy Cow Palace to realize that Barry Goldwater could beat the Democrats. Why? Because in his own tart and true words he offers a choice, not an echo."

J. M. Byron, 54, Succumbs in Hope Hospital

Republicans Select Goldwater, Miller to Be His Running Mate

In Control of Convention All the Way

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Republicans have roared approval of Sen. Barry Goldwater as their presidential nominee and he vows to carry "the conservative cause" to the American voters in November.

The 55-year-old grandson of a Jewish peddler who emigrated to California from London ground moderate Republicans under his steamroller as he pushed to a first-ballot victory Wednesday night.

Twenty-three minutes after the call of the states began, Goldwater became the nominee when South Carolina cast its 16 ballots to put him over the 655 total needed to nominate.

By a motion of Pennsylvania Gov. William W. Scranton, his leading opponent, the nomination was made officially unanimous—but it wasn't quite.

In the midst of the confusion, Sen. Thurston B. Morton of Kentucky, the convention chairman, told a reporter that he had been informed Goldwater had called Rep. William E. Miller of New York, the GOP national chairman, had offered him the vice presidential nomination, and that Miller had accepted.

Both appeared on television later to say that it wasn't quite as buttoned up as Morton had said it was.

Goldwater said he hadn't promised Miller to ask him to accept second place on the ticket, as had been reported. But he added that he is "favorably inclined" toward the upstate New York representative.

Miller, also appearing on television, said he thinks that after a meeting of Goldwater with state chairmen today some definitive announcement on the vice presidential nomination—which he said he would accept would be forthcoming. The vice presidential nominee will be formally elected at tonight's closing session.

Miller, 44 and a Roman Catholic, would be calculated to bring to the ticket a skilled campaigner noted for his rough and tumble political battling. Goldwater has designated him as "a gut fighter."

The new GOP presidential nominee is an Episcopalian. He still holds an interest in swank retail clothing stores in Arizona.

The senator demonstrated control of the party and the convention in contrast to four years ago when, in withdrawing his name from consideration for the nomination, he urged conservatives not to desert the GOP.

This time, it was the party's moderates and liberals who had to march into the glaring lights on the podium to urge their supporters not to take a walk. The

Poultrymen Ask Question Where Now?

By J. C. TILLMAN

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — The poultry industry is at a crossroads, reports the Arkansas Poultry Improvement Association in its 1964 yearbook, and must ask itself the question, "Where Now?"

Paul Miller of Hot Springs, president of the association, writes in the book that since infancy the poultry industry has been concerned primarily with one aspect of growth — production.

The book says that in 1960 poultrymen learned that Americans spent $2 billion for chicken alone, more than ever before.

But they were startled to learn that the $2 billion represented a smaller share (13.7 per cent) of the total meat market than they had captured in 1955 (15.5 per cent.)

"The industry was producing more, enjoying it less, and the reason was clear: poultry people were turning out more chickens than they could turn over at a comfortable profit," the book says.

Miller wrote, "The purpose of the yearbook is to get those who are not doing so already to think seriously about supply and relationship to sales." The yearbook reveals where the industry is, how it got there and what it can expect in the next five to six years.

In the past, the book says, "Producers with millions of perishable birds on hand" found themselves at the mercy of a buyer's market."

Miller says, "Enthusiasm for production and apathy towards effective marketing and merchandising seems to be our biggest problems."

Since its birth in the 1920s, the industry has been riding a production merry-go-round, he says: "Maybe its time not for the industry to stick out its marketing arm to grab the brass ring."

The trainees start at $4,000 a year, perform nonenforcement duties and may become probationary patrolmen at 21.

Economy to Survive Campaign

By SAM DAWSON
AP Business News Analyst

N7W YORK (AP)—Personal political preferences aren't changing most businessmen's conviction that the current economic upswing will survive a heated presidential campaign and the November voting, no matter how it goes.

The forces pushing the economy higher look too strong to be moved much by campaign oratory or dire political predictions.

The latest industrial production figures show how strong the economy is. The new orders still pour in, despite vacation let-downs, are too high to suggest any letup in the fall months.

This is how businessmen are reasoning:

The administration in power has every reason to ward off any faltering. Neither by word nor deed would it do anything but try to make times better. Also, neither the incumbent nor any possible successors after November would have any reason to fight good times. And, at any rate, political measures usually take quite a while in affecting the economy.

All the polls of business thinking continue to show a large majority of businessmen con-dent that the rest of the year is sure to be good. A sizable number go along with government officials in foreseeing good times extending into next year.

Businessmen and consumers still have more to with making times good or bad than does the government.

The government will be pouring more money into the economy the rest of this year than it will be taking out. It always does in the second half of any year, when spending goes right along while tax receipts drop.

The test at the federal government level will come early next year when the receipts pick up. The going LARGE. Corporate profits are soaring this year, and personal incomes continue to climb. Even at lower tax rates, the Treasury take will be substantial.

Will political campaigning affect consumer confidence? The betting is that it isn't likely to.

pendulum had swung to the right in those four years.

The single roll call, hurried to the end in the overcrowded Cow Palace, showed the overwhelming manner in which the Arizona senator had made his views popular with the 1,300 delegates.

The count showed Goldwater 883 and Scranton 214.

At this point a chipper and smiling Scranton appeared dramatically to walk the long length of the platform to the rostrum where, framed in the lights and in the eye of the television cameras, he moved to make Goldwater's nomination unanimous. The hall burst at the seams with the thunder of approval.

Recalling that four years previously Goldwater had stood where he was, Scranton, his face solemn for the moment, told the delegates that the time had come when "an honorable man can say that the sense of this great convention has become abundantly clear." His view had not prevailed, he conceded.

"The Republican party must now emphasize its unity not its differences," Scranton said. His voice was drowned out for the moment by the roar from the convention floor and from the galleries.

"We must now be about the business of defeating Democrats," he continued. "I shall work for and fully support the ticket chosen by this convention."

Although all the other candidates quit, there still remained on the official record of controversy the convention's shouted approval of Scranton's unity motion, 17 votes for Scranton, 31 for Rockefeller, and 51 abstentions from New York.

To soften the bitter attacks they had made on him in the pre-convention campaign, New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller and Scranton hurried to Goldwater's headquarters in a Nob Hill hotel to talk with the winner.

Rockefeller, pushing his way through a crowd of newsmen said "I congratulated him on a tremendous victory." Scranton called next, shortly after Goldwater read a television-radio statement in which he said of the Pennsylvania governor's convention appearance, "I know somewhat how he felt."

All of these efforts to substitute harmony for dissension among the Republicans brought a speedy blast from Democratic National Chairman John M. Bailey.

In Washington, Bailey put out a statement, saying that the Republican party "has been captured by a radical minority. . . completely divorced from the heritage and principles of our nation."

In an obvious indication of the kind of campaign the Democrats intend to launch against Goldwater, Bailey added:

"That radical minority has dictated the choice of a candidate whose purpose is to divide rather than unify the country and whose philosophy has been described by his own party members as a menace to the peace and progress of America."

right to advocate by legal means its repeal or modification."

Sens. Allen J. Ellender, D-La., and A. Willis Robertson, R-Va., among others, fully supported Russell's plea and noted they had taken a similar stand earlier.

Ellender, who spoke out in Louisiana just after President Johnson signed the bill, said today that "so long as this is the law it must be obeyed. This will remain the law until it is modified or repealed by the congress or found unconstitutional by the courts."

He said all parties to a racial dispute must avoid violence and emotionalism.

Robertson, agreeing, said "10 days ago I said that the civil rights bill is no wthe law of the land—even though I think it is a bad law. It should be tested in the courts and not in the streets."

speeches and it was constantly fighting reports that the move was designed to hinder Goldwater's chances of getting the nomination on the first ballot.

Rockefeller said repeatedly that he could not understand the basis for this interpretation. He planned all along to withdraw before the first ballot and the delegation had nine first ballot votes pledged to Goldwater.

The withdrawal left John Paul Hammerschmidt of Harrison, vice chairman of the delegation, with a nomination speech and no one to make it for.

The five-page speech was a typical nomination address, full of praise for Arkansas and Rockefeller.

Hammerschmidt was not too disappointed at losing his big chance to appear on national television and before a live audience with more people than his home town.

Hammerschmidt admitted that he was no speaker and that he approached the job, which became his because he is vice chairman of the delegation, with some trepidation.

Miss Scranton Gets Goldwater Button

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—One visitor to the hotel headquarters of Sen. Goldwater early today was Susan Scranton.

Apparently no one recognized the tall 18-year-old daughter of Pennsylvania Gov. William W. Scranton. She had been in tears a short time earlier when her father lost the GOP presidential nomination.

Her voice hoarse but her smile bright, she strode up to the reception desk on the floor below the Goldwater suite and said:

"Where do I get a Goldwater button?"

As he prepared to begin his address, a group of pickets, mostly teen-agers, lined up near the speaker's platform. The group obviously represented some of his opponents.

Shortly after he began talking another group carrying a banner which read "Leading Exporter of College Students" paraded between the governor and his audience.

Faubus interrupted his speech to allow the group to walk through, but did not stop talking when the group paraded through a second time.

As he started to close his speech after reviewing his administration, Faubus went into his attack on picketing.

"The lot of a public servant is not an enviable one," he said. "There was a time when we could go anywhere and be treated courteously, speak, and the people would decide who to vote for."

"That's the way it ought to be," he said.

"But there was some white scum from up north who organized a bunch of Negroes to picket Alabama Gov. George Wallace when he spoke in Little Rock," Faubus said.

Faubus declared a former aide George Jernigan. Candidate Joe Hubbard charged that Jernigan represented Faubus at a political rally while on the state payroll.

Faubus in Attack on His Pickets

MT. NEBO, Ark. (AP)—Gov. Orval E. Faubus launched a bitter attack against picketing and racial demonstrations Wednesday night in a campaign speech here.

Speaking at the 16th annual Mt. Nebo Chicken Fry, Faubus criticized racial demonstrations at the Republican National Convention and at a Little Rock appearance of Alabama Gov. George Wallace Tuesday night.

Faubus also criticized picketing of any kind and demonstrations against politicians.

As he prepared to begin his address, a group of pickets, mostly teen-agers, lined up near the speaker's platform. The group obviously represented some of his opponents.

Keep Progress Alive in '65

Take a good look at the new Arkansas. Notice the construction activity. Ponder the new and expanded Industries that have brought 90,000 new jobs for Arkansas . . . and the new ones that are coming every day. Think about all of the new job opportunities . . . the new outlook for education . . . expanded hospitals and health services . . . improved highways . . . recreation facilities that attract more tourist dollars every year. Consider these tremendous economic strides that Arkansas has made within the past few years.

It's called progress. A kind of progress that you can see. Progress toward a better way of life for every Arkansan. Governor Faubus has set the pace for this progress. Under his leadership, today's Arkansas is alive with a new sense of direction and purpose. Let's all keep progress alive in '65—with Governor Orval E. Faubus.

back is going to get you votes." When a crowd chanted, "We Want Barry" for 10 minutes at a Madison Square Garden rally in New York, Goldwater finally shouted impatiently, "You'll get him if you'll just be quiet." It was not the usual response of a politician to a cheering throng.

By his own account, Goldwater is bucking the trend of history, seeking the White House as a senator from the small-population Western state of Arizona.

He goes where he wants when he wants, sometimes ignoring what his political advisers regard as pressing local campaign chores.

More than a year ago he said, "I've never done anything to get the nomination, and yet all of a sudden everyone wants to thrust it on me." He used to talk of "the presidential thing" as though he couldn't quite believe it.

But last Jan. 3, Goldwater, 55, announced he was going after the top job. Now he says, "I wouldn't have got into this if I didn't really want it."

But an aide said, "However, he has no overwhelming desire to be president. If he thought there was another conservative who could do the job he'd be glad to have him do it."

Goldwater is no spellbinder on the platform. He delivers some of his toughest campaign attacks in a near-monotone. But sometimes he is eloquent.

"I want to help my country," he told one crowd. "I want to work for it. I want to pay my rent for a Polish grandfather who came to this country through England. I just want to help."

Without a text, Goldwater's words sometimes run away with him. In a Reno television interview, he was asked if he had said something attributed to him, "Not in my most lucid moments," he replied.

He was once quoted as saying he wasn't sure he had "the brains to be the president." Asked about it at Minneapolis, he said, "I've done all right in my life. I don't have a Phi Beta Kappa key, but I hire them. He had a year at the University of Arizona, but quit to join the family department store in Phoenix."

Goldwater's wife, Peggy, doesn't fit the usual pattern either. She shuns the campaign trail.

An introvert in a family of extroverts, she says she worries that she might "say something wrong" in an interview and she's "scared to death" about making a speech.

"I'll be with him wherever he goes, but I don't make speeches," she said.

Look Fellows Don't Bother Girl Athletes

Hanford, Calif. (AP) — Fellows:

If your girl friend can run faster, jump higher or throw farther than you—it's your patriotic duty not to date her. You could be hurting your nation's Olympic effort.

Uncle Sam needs them worse than you do, say the girls' coaches—who might be somewhat prejudiced.

Talent shown by teen-agers at the 1964 National AAU Women's Track and Field Championships points up a happy future for the 1968 Olympics if the girls continue rugged training.

Yet four years is a long time and boys can upset the whole thing. Boy likes girl. Boy dates girl, and blooze goes: the train-

Writers Say Convention Has No Fire

By JAMES MARLOW
Associated Press News Analyst
SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—This Republican convention has all the usual bands, singing, too many speeches—and no fire, thanks to the man with the extinguisher, Sen. Barry Goldwater.

Two things looked certain before the delegates got here: that Goldwater had the presidential nomination locked up and Pennsylvania's Gov. William W. Scranton had no chance for it.

Every time Scranton tried to light a match it got squirted with silence, or near-silence, by the highly confident, well-oiled Goldwater organization.

The attitude and the strategy were obvious enough: Why get Scranton any more attention by arguing with him?

There's no sign Scranton has been able to inflame the delegates from the time he announced his opposition to Goldwater last June 12. On the contrary, his bid for the nomination so far has looked extremely inept and futile.

Sunday night, the convention eve, Goldwater received a letter over Scranton's signature in contemptuous language which the governor himself now says was "too strong." Goldwater's aides played it cool.

They sent a copy of the letter to every delegate and alternate delegate in the belief it would backfire against Scranton. They attached a note from Goldwater's campaign manager, Dennis Kitchel, who said the letter "tragically" reflected on the party and the convention.

But Monday Scranton said he didn't compose the letter, and an aide said the governor hadn't ing schedule.

It has been this way for Uncle Sam in the past and nobody will bet it won't happen again.

Ed Temple of Tennessee State, coach of the women's track team for the 1964 Olympics, explains "If a girl stays in training until she is 22 or 23, she will be at her peak. It's tough to keep them that long."

Looking over the AAU performances, Alex Ferenczy, the coach of the U.S. team against the Russians this year, said "There was a tremendous improvement over other years, especially in the girls' division, 14-17. That gives us great hopes for the 1968 Olympics."

A dozen of the best teen-agers were Wyoming Tyns, women's 100 meter champ and a sophomore at Tennessee State; Janell Smith, a 17-year-old cheerleader from Fredonia, Kan., who captured the 400 from her elders and two 17-year-olds, Eleanor Montgomery of Cleveland and Terrezen Brown of Los Angeles, who were one-two in the high jump.

Those youngsters must be favored for the United States Olympic team at this time.

Coming up are hurdler Tammy Davis, 16, from Frederick, Md., and her teammate, sprinter Debbie Thompson, 17. These two and Lurline Hamilton, also 17, of the Louisiana Track Club, were named as alternates for the U.S.-Russian meet team.

Looking to the future are the girls' sprint queen, Lynda Bradshaw of Oakland; Shirley Wilshaw of Compton, who won the 200 and 400 in the younger class; Francie Kraker of Ann Arbor, Mich., a comely half miler, Nancy Norberg of Palo Alto in the discus, and Lynn Graham of Pasadena in the shot put.

seen it before it went to Goldwater. But Scranton said he is responsible for the letter, nevertheless.

By the time Scranton had decided to get into the contest in June, after wrestling with himself, Goldwater already had enormous delegate strength. He years. Scranton had only about six weeks before the convention to undo it.

His main argument for getting into the race, of course, had to be that Goldwater was not the man for the nomination. To be convincing he would have had to show a vast difference between him and Goldwater or a real danger in Goldwater.

Instead, he started off politely, got impolite, got polite again. It was an on-and-off performance. It seemed uncertain. In short, what he waged was anything but a fierce, all-out fight. Finally, he worked up to calling Goldwater unfit for the presidency.

Meanwhile he put great reliance—or appeared to—in the hope that former President Dwight D. Eisenhower would help him. He necessary magic of swinging delegates to him by coming out in his support.

This kind of impression was further built up by Henry Cabot

Lodge after a talk with Eisenhower. Lodge announced he had quit his job as U.S. ambassador to South Vietnam to come home to help Scranton win.

The former president chilled all this by insisting he was staying neutral.

So Scranton lost what might have been his best bet for influencing the delegates. What good, if any, Lodge was ever able to do for Scranton isn't clear at this writing.

Just before the convention Scranton was so obviously not making progress in winning delegates for himself or weaning them away from Goldwater that he went out to Illinois and started shaking hands with commuters in a railroad station.

But most of the Illinois delegates had already lined up with Goldwater. So what was Scranton doing shaking hands with commuters? He explained it was to convince Illinois Republicans to put the heat on the delegates to join up with Scranton. It didn't work.

If Scranton still hoped that somehow Eisenhower might help him, he got his final disillusionment Monday as the convention opened, and Eisenhower held a news conference. He said he wouldn't endorse anyone.

U.S. Olympic Athletes May Withdraw

BOSTON (AP)—John Thomas says he may not make the Olympics in October. Harold Connolly says this is definitely the last Olympic try for him and his wife, Olga, and Chicago's latest gift to track, Tom O'Hara, has withdrawn from the U.S. squad which will meet the Russians July 25-26.

Although there is no apparent connection between the three stories, the three top U.S. Olympic hopefuls all have the same complaint—money, or rather, the lack of it.

Thomas, the world's best high jumper until replaced by Valery Brumel of Russia and still the best in the United States said Wednesday he may not be able to go to the Olympics in Tokyo if he can't find a job which will allow him time off for training.

The former Boston University performer warned that others are in the same boat. "Only those of us who are able to stick to our training despite serious financial difficulties will get to Tokyo," he said. "I lost my job before the Olympic tryouts because I had taken so much time off to compete in various meets."

Connolly, who holds the world record for the hammer throw and who also has qualified for the Olympics this year with Thomas, said: "It means a sacrifice but we are going all out to win this year—a n dthen retire."

The financial responsibilities he and his wife face include a 5-year old son, twins born last year and Mrs. Connolly's parents.

Right now both he and the Czechoslovakian-born Olga, the Olympic record holder in the discus, are working for the Recreation Department in Culver City, Calif., in jobs which give them enough money to get by and allow them to keep in shape for an Olympic effort.

Hornung Is Back in Top Condition

WEST DE PERE, Wis. (AP) — Green Bay Packer halfback Paul Hornung, free of a year's suspension for betting on games was in near peak form when he reported with the rookies checking in Wednesday night for the start of the training season.

"It would be tough if I waited all year and then flunked the physical," cracked Hornung as he took his place in line. He didn't fail, weighing in at 225 pounds, five more than his playing weight.

"Of course," he said, "that was after a big meal and with my clothes on." Hornung has been under a supervised conditioning program for two months. Part of his schedule included running up and down the steps of City Stadium.

He appeared in excellent condition, without a trace of a 1962 knee problem that slowed the Packers' versatile performer.

Coach Vince Lombardi had suggested that all hands report

They divided the group and gave a demonstration on a city corcus. It was really grand. They did it with so much dignity and self-confidence.

Buddy W.V. Rutherford made some very interesting remarks after the demonstration. He encouraged all parents to be present to encourage their children to take advantage of their opportunities.

Girls and boys are selected for Wonder State and Boys State in this manner.

The State Auxiliary sends a letter form to the Local Auxiliary and to the school asking the following requirements: . . . the Student—

1. Must be a Junior.

2. Must be active in school, church, and civic activities.

3. Must be in good physical health.

4. Must be obedient, and able to get along with others.

5. Then the High School Faculty recommends and votes on the best representatives.

The American Legion would like to invite other organizations desiring to do some civic work along the line of helping our girls and boys to become interested in government to look forward to sending at least one representative next year.

The meeting was climaxed with the election of officers. The election was held by the first post commander Buddy Calvin Coleman. All officers succeeded themselves in both the Legion and Auxiliary. The Lieutenant Governor Miss Lois Lloyd installed the Auxiliary officers and Miss Linda Ann Pondexter, Governor of Girl State, installed the Legionnaires.

Yankees Take League Lead Behind Ford

By MIKE RATHET Associated Press Sports Writer

Whitey Ford of the New York Yankees has pitched his seventh shutout of the season, but he allowed only three hits.

That's the easy way. For a real spectacular achievement, there's Jim Grant of the Minnesota Twins, who pitched his first shutout of the season.

He allowed 13 hits. Ford hurled the Yankees into the American League lead Wednesday in a head-to-head battle with Baltimore, blanking the Orioles 2-0 while Joe Pepitone took care of the runs with a two-run single in the second inning.

Pitching one of his strongest games of the year, Ford prevented the Orioles from getting a man beyond first base as he brought his record to 12-2, lowered his earned run average to 1.98 and extended the Yankees winning streak to six games.

Hours later, Grant took the mound for the Twins and started laboring. He gave up eight hits in the first four innings—three in the fourth—but managed to keep the Washington Senators from scoring as he wound up with a 6-0 victory.

Ford's three-hitter was the eighth in the AL this season and the 19th in the majors, but Grant stepped up to a plateau that hasn't been reached since May 26, 1959, when Lew Burdette of Milwaukee allowed Pittsburgh 13 hits before winning 1-0 in 13 innings.

The loser that Joe was Harvey Haddix, who pitched 12 innings of perfect ball against the Braves.

One other shutout was turned in Wednesday, Dean Chance of Los Angeles getting his second straight in the nightcap as the Angels swept Detroit 5-4 and 1-0. Elsewhere, Dick Stuart hit two three-run homers as Boston crushed the Chicago White Sox 11-2 and Kansas City took two from Cleveland 5-3 and 3-2.

In the National League, Milwaukee whipped first-place San Francisco 6-2, Pittsburgh shut out Philadelphia 3-0, Cincinnati edged Houston 2-1, the Los Angeles Dodgers belted St. Louis 13-3 and the Chicago Cubs edged the New York Mets 3-2.

The second game of the vital Yankees-Orioles series was decided in the second inning when Mickey Mantle opened with a single off Dave McNally. Tom Tresh walked and the two worked a double steal. One out later, Pepitone lined a single to right—and Ford took it from there.

Grant won his fourth in five decisions since being acquired from Cleveland and brought his over-all record to 7-5. Home runs by Jimmie Hall, Rich Rollins and Jim Snyder supplied the Twins with more than enough firepower, although they were out 13-11.

The Angels also got the job done with homers. Lou Clinton and Felix Torres connected in the opener in support of Barry Latman, who snapped a six-game losing streak. Bob Perry's eighth inning homer off Tiger starter Phil Regan enabled Chance to win the nightcap.

Chance, bringing his record to 7-5, struck out 12 and now has pitched a shutout in each of his five complete games this season. His latest lowered his ERA to a spectacular 1.38.

Stuart's first homer in the

Slumping Phils Lose But So Do the Giants

By MURRAY CHASS Associated Press Sports Writer

Philadelphia, Gene Mauch said, was having troubles with left-handers.

The Phillies had some more Wednesday night. Jerry Lynch, a southpaw swinger, clouted a three-run homer, powering Pittsburgh to a 3-0 victory over Philadelphia.

In talking about the Phillies' recent problems, Manager Mauch was referring specifically to left-handed pitchers. But Lynch's blast—to the opposite field—did as much damage as pitchers have been doing.

The Phillies have dropped six of their last seven games since vaulting into first place in the National League. The slump has tumbled them back out of first—although not by much.

First-place San Francisco also lost Wednesday night, 6-2 to surging Milwaukee, keeping Philadelphia just one game behind.

Some shoddy fielding contributed to the Phillies' latest loss. After Manny Mota led off the fourth inning with a single, Roberto Clemente grounded to third baseman Richie Allen.

The rookie let the ball get by him for an error, and shortstop Ruben Amaro, backing the play picked up the ball and tossed it wildly to second, permitting the runners to advance one base each.

Lynch followed with his home run off Alvin Bunting.

Elsewhere in the NL, Cincinnati edged Houston 2-1, Los Angeles bombed St. Louis 13-3 and Chicago nipped New York 3-2.

In American League action, New York blanked Baltimore 2-0, Boston trampled Chicago 11-2, Los Angeles swept Detroit 5-4 and 1-0, Kansas City took Cleveland 5-3 and 3-2 and Minnesota whipped Washington 6-0.

Bob Friend scattered seven singles, evening his record at 8-8. The Phillies put the first two men on in the eighth, but Friend fanned Tony Gonzalez and induced John Herrington to hit into a double play. Bunting, the perfect game pitcher, lost his fourth game against nine victories.

The Giants took a 2-1 lead on Willie Mays' 28th homer, a two-run blast in the fifth. But the Braves rallied in the seventh, scoring three runs. Hank Aaron singled across the tying run, and Lee Maye followed with a two-run double.

Ed Mathews added a two-run homer in the eighth. Aaron's career singles gave him 2,005 career hits.

Willie Davis and Tommy Davis also connected as Larry Miller recorded his first major league victory. The Dodgers collected four runs in the fourth on two hits, two errors and a wild pitch.

Dick Farrell was frustrated for the seventh time in his attempt to win his 11th game for Houston. Farrell won his 10th game on June 14, the first pitcher to win that many this season.

But Marty Keough's two-run homer in the third inning shattered any thought Farrell had of finally winning. Jim O'Toole picked up his 10th victory against four defeats.

Chicago edged New York behind the hitting and pitching of Lew Burdette. The veteran right-hander scattered nine hits in boosting his mark to 5-2 and homered for the deciding run in the eighth inning. Charlie Smith hit a homer for the Mets in the ninth.

Aging Ford Hurls Shutout for Yankees

By JACK HAND Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—Whitey Ford was taking a deep drag of a glass of iced tea (honest) in the clubhouse when a covey of writers caught up with him.

"Did you know you beat all the Yankees in shutouts?" a fellow asked. "Guys like Red Ruffing, Heb Pennock, Lefty Gomez, Allie Reynolds. You beat them all."

Whitey had just thrown the 41st shutout of his career, a three-hit, 2-0 job against Baltimore in 90-plus heat Wednesday afternoon. The 35-year-old pitcher-coach wasn't about to get too excited.

"When you stick around as long as me, you ought to catch up to someone," said Ford. "Later on, when I quit, it will mean more to me when I get a chance to think about it."

French Open Won By Argentinian

CHANTILLY, France (AP)—

Robert De Vincenzo of Argentina, dropping a six-inch putt on the fifth extra hole and claimed his third French Open golf title Wednesday.

De Vincenzo, who had a one-stroke lead going into the 18-hole final, finished the scheduled 72 holes in a tie with South African Cobie Legrange, each with a 12-under-par 272.

De Vincenzo, who had won this tourney in 1950 and 1960, and Legrange immediately went into a sudden-death playoff and each had birdie fours on the easy, par-five first hole. They each parred the next three.

Phil Rodgers, La Jolla, Calif., who led after the first round and was only one back after 36 holes, ballooned to a 75 in the morning and ad a 73 for a 284 total, finishing far back. Guy Wolstenholme of Britain, Angel Miguel of Spain and Tony Grubb of Britain tied for third place a 277, five strokes back of the leaders.

PGA Least Important of Bia Meets

Associated Press Sports Writer

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)— "The way we play it now, our championship is just another 'Swinging Door Open,' snorted one pro golfer.

"Listen! the object of professional golf is to make money—and this is the only way to make it," says another.

And so the argument goes, behind the scenes at the Professional Golfers Association tournament, which opened today at the Columbus Country Club with home town boy Jack Nicklaus defending his title.

Nicklaus' Arnold Palmer and red hot Tony Lema are co-favorites in the field of 165, which will be cut to the low 90 after two rounds and to the low 60 for the final 18 holes on Sunday.

The PGA is the last of the Big Four—which includes the Masters and the U.S. and British Opens—and despite the money involved, it is the least important of the four.

Some players would like to go back to the old head-and-head match play format that was used up to 1958 in an effort to restore the prestige of the tournament.

The colorful Walter Hagen, who could bluff his own mother out of a two-foot putt, won the PGA four straight years at match play, and for many years it was the only major tournament in which the pros played the game the same way the public course hacks do—hole by hole.

But it was also the only major tournament that was a steady money loser.

"We couldn't give it away," says PGA tournament director Joe Black.

"Clubs didn't want it. You couldn't sell tickets, and you couldn't sell it to television."

"Some years all the big names would get knocked off the first thing. There went your drawing cars. And on the last day you only had two players, and only four the day before. There's a limit to the number of people who can watch just two players."

"So I don't think you'll even see the PGA tournament go back to match play."

"However, the fellows themselves would love to have a match play tournament on the schedule. It probably would take a big commercial sponsor to back the tournament."

Young Girl Is Latest Tennis Find

RIVER FOREST, Ill. (AP)—

A 15-year-old girl who grew up on the wrong side of the tracks in bustling Hamtramck, Mich., is doing everything right on the tennis court.

Her performance at the National Clay Courts Tennis Championships have left fans with the distinct impression Jane (Peaches) Bartkovic will be the next Maureen Connolly.

Last Saturday, Peaches—a seldom-smiling tigress on the courts—won the Wimbledon junior title. In the current clay courts meet, she has swept past her first two opponents.

Seeing Peaches off court is one thing. Seeing her play is another. She is perhaps the shyest girl to reach national competition. But she has not lost a match this year against 12 opponents, featuring a devastating forehand, whipped by a frail body.

From a poor, hard-working family, Peaches made her starts in a public park tennis class when she was 16 years old under tutoring of Mrs. Gerald Hoxie, well-known tennis patron

EDITOR'S NOTE — Preston Grover, for five years Associated Press chief of bureau in Moscow, reports on aspects of life in the U.S.S.R.

By PRESTON GROVER
MOSCOW (AP)—If you don't look too closely, this country is in many respects almost like the United States. In many others, it is not.

Far more people go to the movies than to church. You buy your food in stores, meat from the butcher, bread from the baker and shoes, cloth, waste baskets and aluminum pots from the department store.

On Sunday you can go to the races in Moscow, and on Monday read another letter from an angry housewife demanding that the race betting machines be closed because "they are the incarnation of Communist youth."

The boys and girls in college take to one another a little too freely, in the view of the elders, but when an order was issued at Moscow University prohibiting girls from visiting alone with young men in the dormitories, there was a loud outcry from the students. In a newspaper article they accused their elders of hypocrisy and insisted they didn't need to be coddled.

Divorce courts function, far more simply than in America. Just as in America, the courts try to effect a reconciliation. The percentage is low. The baby? Grandmother will look after it.

In the five years I have been here, clothes have grown noticeably better. For the most part they still are shoddy as to material, and even far more shoddy as to design. Yet a style show just held displayed men's and women's things much better made. They haven't reached the stores yet. Prices of shoes and clothing are atrociously high, a suit often the price of two months salary.

Americans always have been liked, and envied, by a great body of the population which would like to have things here the way they are found in America. In spite of Premier Khrushchev's promises, it isn't going to be that way very soon, and Russians know it.

There is a growing resistance to the constant nagging of the party and government. Some time ago one of the perennial "do-gooders" assigned to help police the streets tried to take a group of celebrating young men to the police station for singing too loudly in the streets at night. In the fracas the

Hope Youngsters Hit the Campaign Trail

at the Hotel Pines in Pine Bluff. Earlier in the day, the youngsters campaigned in Hot Springs. They braved 100-degree heat to hand out literature in support of Murphy, who is running against incumbent Oren Harris.

youths beat the man to death. One was sentenced to be shot and another to 15 years in prison. But less violent resistance shows up often. The great Anglo-Saxon desire to be let alone is showing up here although it is contrary to all Communist party discipline.

Despite Communist efforts to provide bread and circuses, life is drab for most people. In an organized sort of way, the Communist party tries to do something about it. The colorful church holidays and ceremonies have almost disappeared from Soviet life and there is a frantic effort to find something to replace them, for there is a slight drift back to religious ways.

"We invite you to create new holidays and make them gay and festive," said the labor paper, Trud, this spring. "Let there be new and beautiful rituals in factories, towns and mines," the paper said. It urged planting a tree by the father of a newborn.

A new apartment always is the reason for a wild party. That is easy to understand. Scores of thousands of families still live two to three families in a single room, with a common bathroom, and a common kitchen. Now it is practically forbidden to move into Moscow, while the city catches up with its housing.

Temperatures Are Rising

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Gradually rising temperatures was the U.S. Weather Bureau's prediction for Arkansas weather through Friday.

And more humidity will come with the warmer temperatures, the bureau said, as a warm front pushes northward.

The outlook is for clear to partly cloudy weather with maximum temperatures in the low to mid 90s and overnight low readings in the mid 60s to low 70s.

The bureau's only prediction for rain is in the extreme North where there is a chance of a thundershower tonight or Thursday.

Maximum temperatures Tuesday ranged from 84 at Memphis to 96 at Fort Smith. Overnight low readings ranged from 65 at Fort Smith to 73 at Texarkana.

Inspection of River Project

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Col. Richard H. Free, who will become Southwest Division Army Engineer on July 24, visits Arkansas Thursday and Friday to see Arkansas River work.

Free will attend the meeting Friday of the Arkansas Basin Association here.

He succeeds Brig. Gen. Carroll T. Dunn, who was transferred from division headquarters in Dallas, Tex., to Korea, where he will be deputy chief of staff of the 8th Army.

Tribute to the Dead in Viet Nam

Editor's Note—More than 150 U.S. servicemen have died in action against the Viet Cong in South Viet Nam. This is how one of them died.

By PETER ARNETT

(AP)—When Maj. Charles L. SAIGON, South Viet Nam Kelly flew his helicopter down to the Mekong River delta seven months ago, he told everyone he met: "We fly anywhere, any time."

This curt phrase, delivered flatly in a Georgia drawl, and his rigorous adherence to it, weaved an aura around the tough, slightly built major. Kelly, from Sylvania, Ga., joined the airwaves—mostly in the acting area.

As "The Patty Duke Show" moves into its second season I can't help but hope that the series goes on an awfully long time so that I can make the transition from a teen-ager to an adult without any break or gap in my career.

I'm hoping that this will take care of my awkward years.

Keeping Up To Time

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — Nigeria has signed an agreement with the Swiss Watch Manufacturers Federation to establish a watch repair section in the suburban Yaba Technical Institute, ambassador to Nigeria, signed for the federation. The new section is expected to improve watch repair standards in this West African country.

fl we an ambulance helicopter with bright red crosses painted on its sides. He didn't carry a gun, but a medical bag which he sometimes opened to help out hard-pressed doctors flying with him into battle areas.

He was carrying this bag when he flew into a hamlet in Viet Nam.

It was within reach when he died there.

Kelly commanded the 57th U.S. Medical Detachment, a unit charged with flying wounded and dead out of combat zones.

When Kelly, a decorated veteran of World War II, took over the unit it operated only in the day time. But 12 hours of daylight was not enough for Kelly. After arguing with his superior officers he was able to confidently begin saying: "We fly anywhere, any time."

This took Kelly, 40, to every corner of the delta where battles were fought.

Kelly was aware of the dangers he took. Every day he was witness to the inevitable result of battle, the wounded and the dead. This seemed to strengthen his resolve to do all he could to help.

He insisted on flying at night in a helicopter. "This way we don't have to carry lights, and can move undetected," he said. More than once he landed his ship by flashlight, flickering it on the ground as he landed.

Often at night, radio operators in distant posts would hear crackling over the radio: "This is ole Dustoff (Kelly's code name). Just passing over. Everything O.K.?"

The call Kelly took at his base July 1 was a routine one. A U.S. adviser had been wounded by a Communist mortar round and needed immediate evacuation.

Kelly arrived over the location in Viet Nam Province and steered his helicopter toward a landing. There had been no Communist fire for some time but as he came in the Communists opened up on his red cross-marked ship with heavy volleys of small arms fire.

"Dustoff, Dustoff," the radio urged. "Take off, take off, small arms fire."

Kelly, maneuvering in for a landing, replied firmly, "I'll move when I have the wounded with me."

They were his last words. A bullet hit him in the chest, killing him instantly. The helicopter rolled over, breaking the leg of the U.S. doctor riding inside.

In a tribute to Kelly, the U.S. weekly paper published in Saigon said: "When Maj. Kelly died, a small part of every man in the delta went with him."

A SURE THING

By Vesta M. Kelly

Al Wade parked the car just around the corner, less than a block from the store. He pocketed the keys, but left the door unlocked. He'd only be gone a minute.

Then he walked down the side street, circled around several blocks to approach the store from the opposite direction. Everything just as he'd planned. He knew what he was doing. He'd been here before.

Al liked a sure thing. He picked his places carefully. A small store with a reasonable amount of money in the till. Nothing spectacular. He didn't want a fuss.

At least there was no fuss while he was around. After he left, there would probably be plenty of disturbance but that wouldn't concern him, because he'd be far away by then.

A small place, then, run by an old man or a small woman. That was the best bet. They didn't give any trouble.

A shiv was all the weapon he needed. Time to pocket the money. A place to lock them up. Five minutes to his car and drive away. That was all Al Wade wanted.

Approaching the store, he held his pace to a casual walk. He'd cased this job carefully. An old man, a pint-sized dame. Threaten the girl with the knife and the old man would do as he was told.

Al Wade knew that he was in luck when he saw the old man come out of the store and go across the street.

Well, just the girl, then. Good! Al walked past the window, looking in. The girl was alone. She was bent over the counter, her pencil poised above a crossword puzzle.

She looked up when he went in. He walked beside the counter, to the opening by the cash register. The girl came up, smiling, helpful.

She was a cute little thing. Stacked. The kind that wouldn't look at him twice. Well, he'd wipe that smile off her face.

"This is a stick-up, baby. Just keep your mouth shut and gimme the money."

She turned obediently toward the register. Scared, he thought by the look on her face. That's the way he liked to see them—scared. His hand came out of his pocket. The knife snickered open.

She whirled at the sound, horror on her face.

"Too bad that he didn't have time to stick around and enjoy himself."

"Get the money, hurry!"

He thrust the knife at her. Suddenly, her hand darted out, the heel striking the muscle of his forearm a sharp blow. The knife clattered across the floor. Instinctively, his hand nursed the pain in his arm. In that moment she was past him, through the opening in the counter, running toward the front of the store.

Two long strides and he grabbed her from behind, pinning her arms down. She screamed. He thought she had fainted, for she slumped against him. Then, she took a step away from him, and suddenly their feet were all tangled up. He fell heavily backwards to the floor, cracking his

20 Others Picked to Be Counselors

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — The Employment Security Division said Tuesday that 20 more Arkansans have been picked for special training as counselors to underprivileged young people.

Nine were assigned to Fisk University, a Negro college at Nashville, Tenn. The others were assigned to white colleges.

Last week 12 college graduates from Arkansas chosen for the eight-week courses were assigned to Fisk. Four others were notified that they had been assigned to Tuskegee Institute, a Negro college at Tuskegee, Ala.

At least 10 of the first 12 turned down the offer, the ESD said.

The selections and the schools they were assigned to:

Rebecca Reynolds of Arkadelphia, to the University of Ohio, Athens, Ohio; Stephen F. Gaur of Osceola, Julius C. Hogrefe of Dover, Mary B. Rogers of Arkadelphia, Jimmy P. Blackburn of Paragould, Ronald K. Laster of Hot Springs, Donna S. Crowder of Little Rock, Frankie A. Bowlin of Conway, Mary E. Banks of Hot Springs, Sarah R. Bates of Fordyce and Harold Jr. of Leachville, to Texas Western University, El Paso, Tex.;

Martha Mitchell of Magnolia, Floyd L. Jones of West Helena, Terry C. Roberts of Newport, Susan M. Reddin of Monticello, Garrett Plant of Hot Springs, Shirley J. Brewer of Mlavern, Helen I. Etrod of North Little Rock, Charles Hemmenway of Newport and Mary I. Hargraves of Helena, to Fisk University.

The trainees were selected by the Labor Department on the basis of tests conducted by the ESD.

head. While he lay stunned for a moment, she grabbed up his outflung hand in both of hers. When he tried to move, pain—excruciating pain—shot up his arm.

"Lie still or I'll break it," she said.

Then she threw back her head and gave a loud yell for help which showed that in addition to having perfect muscular coordination, she had an excellent pair of lungs. Her cry brought the old man from a nearby gas station.

The old man had heard her scream. Now, he raced across the sidewalk and into the store, followed by a big man in gas station coveralls.

"Ann," the old man said.

"Ann," they grabbed Al, jerking him to his feet.

"Are you hurt, Ann?" the old man asked.

"I ought to sock him one," the big man said.

When the police arrived, the big man pushed Al toward them.

Al saw the girl called Ann, fly into the open arms of a young, redheaded policeman, her big salt tears splashing on his immaculate tunic. The policeman's arms closed around her, tenderly, protectively.

"He came at her with that knife," the big man said pointing at Al. "And, by golly, she took it away from him."

Al Wade's defiant stare slid to the floor. A cop's girl! Of all the lousy luck!

"Lucky you taught her that Defendo," the old man said. "It sure worked."

Television and Radio

By E. G. MARSHALL
(For Cynthia Lowry)

NEW YORK (AP) — Among the basic needs of civilized man are companionship of one's fellows and the stimulation of contrasting temperaments, interests and tastes. And solitude.

The opportunity for solitude is everywhere around us, but most of us are not receptive to it. Rather a boring companion than loneliness.

We have the radio playing while we eat or even while we bathe. People clutch transistor radios as they ride the bus. In stores there is music, in elevators, and from every corner of every street.

People seem afraid of silence and their thoughts. The need for solitude, like many instinctual things, it is not recognizable for what it is until it is experienced.

One can be alone in a crowded city, certainly, but "cities give not the human senses room enough." The constant hammering of city life erode one's nerve and spirit.

To be absolutely alone in the midst of nature, with only the sound of nature, is perhaps the greatest refreshment one can know.

Henry David Thoreau said, "We need to witness our own limit transgressed."

These remain fine-sounding word and sentiment until the day when in the raw middle of winter, you are pulling a toboggan across a meadow with high-deep snow, a 25-mile wind blowing and a temperature of 12 degrees below zero biting into your marrow. On the toboggan there is a five-gallon can of kerosene, a 100-pound sack of coal and provisions enough to last three or four days.

You climb a steep logging road to a sugar house in the woods, pulling the toboggan behind you step by painful step. Feet must be pushed down through the snow to well above the knee. Halfway up you stop and look back and see your tracks being covered by wind-blown snow.

Then you see, at long last, the roof peak of your place in the wild. If you had the breath to sing you would.

Sitting before the hearth, the first flames licking the frozen logs into warm life, a cup of hot tea doing the same for you—a sudden joy lifts your spirits, you feel a new health and solace.

After a day or two of solitude one begins to yearn for companionship, but in a new way. Not for diversion or escape from ennui, or from emptiness, but from fullness; the desire to communicate, to sing the songs one has recalled, to relate an anecdote long forgotten, to talk about the weather.

The enrichment of one's soul does not need discussion for affirmation.

Jack Troubled in His Travel and Golf Play

By JIM BECKER
Associated Press Sports Writer

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Jack Nicklaus traveled 10,000 miles, tied the St. Andrews course record, sat up all night worrying about a train wreck, lost his passport, had to talk his way back into the country, got a vaccination he didn't need and then had to switch airplanes when an engine conked out.

And he still didn't qualify for the World Series of Golf.

So this week Big Jack will try it in his own back yard.

The last of the Big our golf titles—the PGA—opens Thursday here in the town where the 24-year-old Golden Bear grew up and learned to bash the ball farther than any other player.

It's Jack's last chance to get into the field in the World Series, which is played just up the road in Akron, and pays $50,000 to the winner. Nicklaus has won it both years it has been played.

Arnold Palmer won the Masters. Ken Venturi took the U. S. Open, and Tony Lema the British Open last week despite a great charge by Nicklaus.

They are here for the PGA, plus such as Ben Hogan, Byron Nelson and Sam Snead, but Nicklaus will have home cooking and home rooting going for him.

He was glad to get back to both after the British Open, where he shot a course record, equaling 66 and a 68 on the final day for the finest two rounds ever played in one day at hallowed St. Andrews.

Lema replied with 68 and 70, and won by five strokes.

But Nicklaus' troubles were only beginning. He and his wife, Barbara, decided to take the train from Scotland to London.

"I was up all night, worrying," he said. "I think the trains run on the wrong side over there anyway. It always sounded to me like we were going to crash everytime one came in the other direction."

"After all, I haven't been on a train since I was 12 years old. Then I lost the passports."

"Well, they let us get on the plane, and we talked our way into the country when we hit New York, but we had to get new vaccinations, and I think mine is going to take."

"Then we got on a private plane I borrowed, and just got in the air and one of the engines conked out, so we had to go back and get another plane. Quite a trip."

America's first globe maker was James Wilson, a little-educated farmer who sold $310 worth of his livestock for an encyclopedia to study cartography, mathematics, geography and astronomy.

GOLDEN SWISS CHEESE SALAD

This hefty main dish salad offers a thick tumble of rich Swiss cheese chunks, with chopped onion mixed through and big wedges of red juicy tomatoes to cap it all. But what makes the salad a real wow is the dressing—a new golden Italian dressing, smooth and mellow with subtle undertones of garlic, chili pepper and oregano. It's also a dressing that keeps its creamy golden color and smoothness because it never separates. You marinate the cheese-onion mixture in the dressing for awhile in the refrigerator to marry the flavors and give the salad the chill that's so good in a summer dish. Then serve it on lettuce. Good with the salad would be rounds of rye bread and a big pitcher of iced tea.

Swiss Cheese Salad with new Golden Italian Dressing

1/2 cup Wish-Bone Golden Italian Dressing*
1 teaspoon prepared mustard
1/2 pound sliced Swiss cheese, cut in small squares
1 small onion, chopped
2 medium tomatoes, cut in 6 wedges each

In measuring cup, beat together bottled golden Italian dressing and mustard. In small bowl, add dressing mixture to cheese and onion; mix well. Marinate in refrigerator for 1/2 hour. Serves on lettuce leaves and garnish with tomato wedges. Makes 6 servings.

*Generic Term: bottled golden Italian dressing.

"DEAR ABBY"

SHE CUTS POOR FIGURE!

By Abigail Van Buren

Dear Abby: We (four sisters) were quite young when our grandmother passed away, leaving us all her lovely cut glass. I married first, so I stored the box of cut glass in my attic. When the next sister married she had a china closet, so she asked me if she could keep the cut glass in her home. I agreed. Then the other two girls married. It has been twelve years, and now the other sisters (and I too) could use our share. When I asked the sister who has it displayed in her china closet for my share, she told me I had GIVEN it all to her. She can keep mine, but the other sisters feel that I GAVE theirs to her, too. How can I right this without creating hard feelings?

A SISTER

Dear Sister: Tell your sisters that you did not GIVE the cut glass away—you agreed only to let your sister keep it until the others had use for it. Then it will be up to the sisters to claim what is rightfully theirs. But tell them not to be disappointed if they don't get it. Families have been shattered over less than a few pieces of cut glass.

Dear Abby: Whenever I need new clothes, my mother takes me shopping. I am 13 and think I should be able to go in the stores alone first and pick out what I like, and then bring in my mother to make the final decision. Lots of my friends do that, but I am afraid of suggest it to my mother because it might hurt her feelings. Should I?

TEEN-AGER

Dear Teen-Ager: You are sweet to be so considerate of your mother's feelings. Honey, I should think she would welcome a plan that would save her the time and wear and tear of shopping.

Dear Abby: My husband and I were invited to this couple's home for the evening. We sat in the living room talking. The men were watching television and I was trying to carry on a conversation with the hostess. She picked up her knitting, and every time I spoke to her she said, "Sh... I'm counting." So you think of a hostess like that? The rest of the evening was spent in quiet while she knit. What do you think you go back there again

GOP Fight Pleasant to Johnson

By JAMES MARLOW
Associated Press News Analyst

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson couldn't have it better if he had cooked it up. Republicans are boxing themselves in, which is fine for Johnson who has to run against one of them, since nothing slows a runner like the inside of a box. They have to climb over Viet Nam, civil rights, words that can hardly be withdrawn or explained away, and a highly unpleasant intraparty struggle.

Even Republicans on the same side don't agree on what the issues are.

For 10 months Henry Cabot Lodge, as U.S. ambassador, was the Kennedy-Johnson administration's chief agent in fighting communism in Viet Nam.

He quit to come home and help Pennsylvania's Gov. William W. Scranton try to beat Sen. Barry Goldwater for the Republican presidential nomination.

If anybody is an authority on what's happening in Southeast Asia it should be Lodge. He said the war against communism there is on the right track.

And he said more: he doesn't see how Viet Nam could become a campaign issue.

But Scranton, the man he came home to help, says it is. So does Goldwater. And this week so did a group of House Republicans.

They criticized the Johnson administration, even though Lodge was serving it, and said its policy in Viet Nam was "why win?"

If the Republicans do make it an issue, they put Lodge in the middle.

Johnson can throw Lodge's words back at them, since as ambassador he was part and parcel of the administration's policy and approved it.

There had been speculation that if Scranton lost the nomination to Goldwater he might run for the vice presidency on the senator's ticket.

It was reasoned that in this way the two wings of the party might be kept from flying apart.

For a while it looked possible. No matter how much he criticized Goldwater, Scranton said he would support the Arizonaan if he got the nomination.

This seems out the window now for Scranton has reached the point of saying Goldwater is unfit for the presidency. How, now, could he urge Goldwater's election?

Meanwhile, Goldwater, by his vote against the civil rights bill, has created a problem for Northern and Eastern Republicans with large Negro voting populations in their states and districts.

The senator has said a Republican couldn't win this year without the South. And no doubt his vote won him friends among Southern Whites.

But if he should try to appease Northern Negroes, or help Northern Republican politicians, by saying if elected he would enforce the civil rights act, then he could lose what he gained among Southern Whites without persuading Northern Negroes. There's no indication he has anything like this in mind.

Upon his return Monday Lodge hinted he would try to get Dwight D. Eisenhower to come out for Scranton before the Republican convention opens July 13.

Monday he talked to the former president and later said he expected him to speak out on the nomination before July 13.

Goldwater has a carload of convention delegates in his pocket. He worked for them the hard way and looks like a man with a stranglehold on the nomination.

He owes nothing to such big Eastern Republicans as Scranton, Lodge, and New York's Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller, since all of them opposed him.

If now Eisenhower joins them but Goldwater wins anyway, he'll owe even less. Almost cer-

Help From Henry

And Henrietta

Sydney, Australia AP — Foreman electrician Tom Taylor had to thread a telephone line through an 80 foot pipe, 1 1/4 inches in diameter. The pipe, with four bends and embedded in concrete was in a new 13-story building.

The usual methods of pliable taintly then the conservatives would control the party.

This might split the Republicans, although Goldwater would need all the Republican help around.

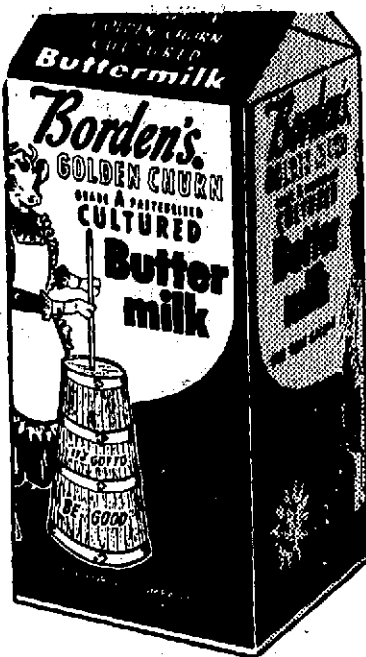

Johnson must be enjoying the show. News out of the White House says he won't be traveling much in July, the Republican convention month.

wire, water and compressed air didn't work.

So Taylor went down to the local pet shop and bought Henry and Henrietta. He took Henry to one end of the pipe and tied a piece of cotton to his tail.

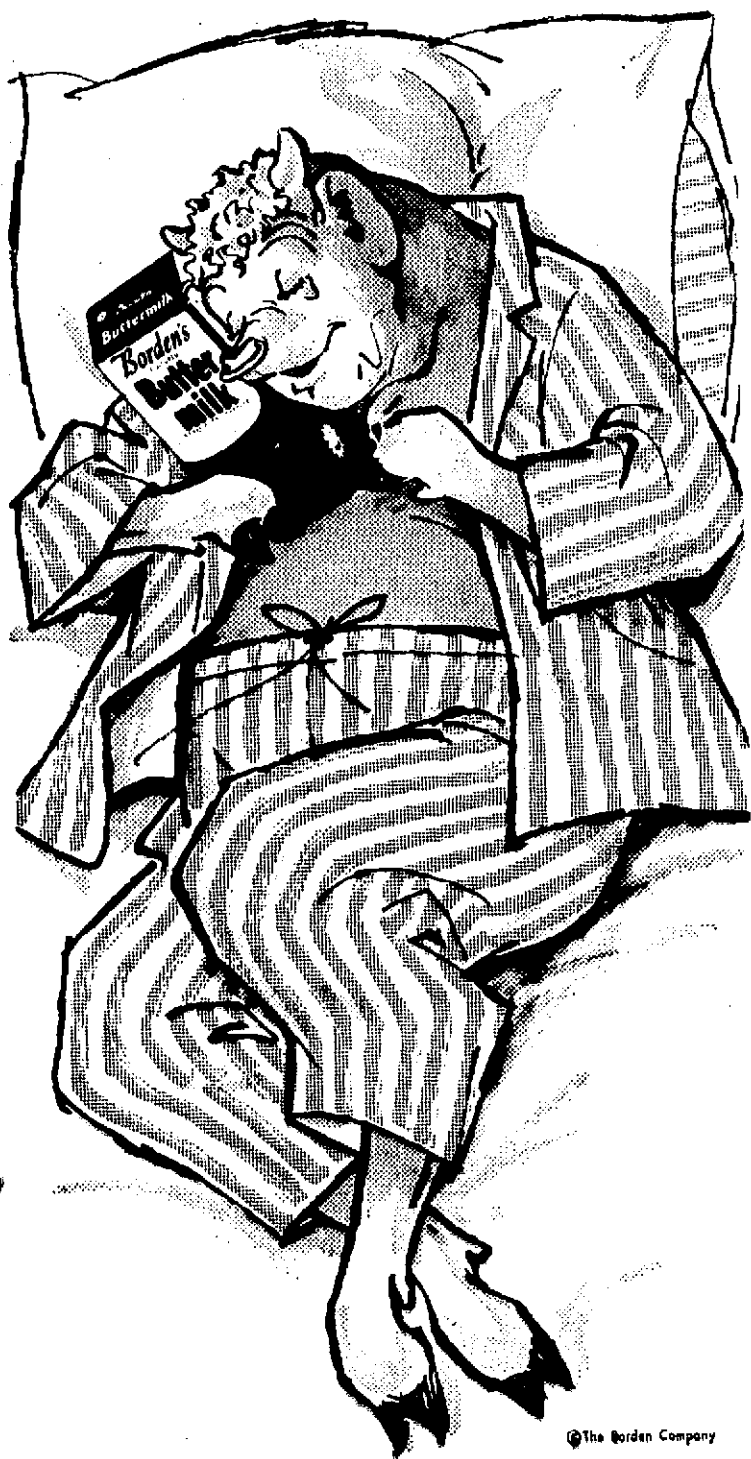

An assistant had Henrietta at the other end. He gave her a gentle squeeze; she squeaked. Henry moved down the pipe. Fifteen minutes later he joined Henrietta. Electricians used the cotton to pull string through, and string to pull the wire.

Henry and Henrietta? They were a pair of white mice. Henrietta later escaped from her cardboard box and was never seen again. At last report Taylor was trying to decide what to do with Henry.

Checks Pose Problems to U.S. Bankers

By SAM DAWSON
AP Business News Analyst

NEW YORK (AP)—Many of the nation's leading bankers are in New York this week to tackle the problem of one kind of flood control. That's the handling of personal checks, which have nearly doubled in number in the last 10 years, the outpouring is expected to double again in the next 10.

Standardization has pretty well licked today's problem. You probably know it as that funny looking printing at the bottom of your checks.

But will more automation be needed to keep tomorrow's flood from engulfing the banks? That's what more than 1,000 bank executives—some from 24 other countries—are debating at the American Bankers Association's national automation conference.

When standardization efforts started in 1954, this nation's banks had 47 million checking accounts and what they then thought was quite a paper mountain of eight billion checks a year.

Today they have 63 million accounts and an annual check turnover of 15 billion. About 90 per cent of all bills are paid that way. Before this decade is over Americans may well be writing 20 billion checks a year.

The ABA estimates that 700 commercial banks now have data processing systems, mostly to handle checks. To this some banks have added computers in the last four years to run herd on savings, installment credit and mortgage accounts.

But on the standardization problem almost all of the 14,000 banks, acting through the ABA, turned to industry experts, such as engineers, computer technicians, printers and government officials. They used the facilities of the American Standardization Association to work out automated check handling.

They developed two technical tools: magnetic ink character recognition—MICR—and the odd-shaped numbers at the bottom of your check known as E13-B.

This is how it works: The E13-B system uses the basic digits of zero to nine, plus four special control symbols for the bank's application. When the bank prints your personal check, special ink imprints your account number on the bank draft in these digits and symbols.

When your check is cashed, it passes under electronic sensing equipment. An electric charge magnetizes the ink, the check is automatically read for the account number, the amount of money involved, and the bank on which it is drawn. Where banks have computers available, these then sort, list, and post the checks at the rate of thousands a minute.

The E13-B numbering system has spread to such things as credit cards, invoices, traveler's checks, even office records. There is now talk of adopting a global standard for worldwide banking.

But this week the bankers are talking even farther into the future. At the meeting they are hearing of the wonders to come—the day when their customers would have their pay automatically deposited in the bank by the employer, and withdrawn electronically by merchants honoring customers' credit cards.

That could chip away at what bankers see as an ever-growing mountain of personal checks, billions and ever more billions of them.

Bilateral Peace Corps

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP)—Nigeria and Guinea have agreed to exchange teachers in a sort of bilateral peace corps between the two West African countries. Salifu Taure, permanent secretary to the president of Guinea, said during a visit here that teachers and advanced students would come to Nigeria during school vacations to assist in rural development projects. Nigeria would reciprocate "in the spirit of Addis Ababa," he said.

Television and Radio

Editors Note — The fine actress who moved from a sensitive portrayal of young Helen Keller on the stage to film versions of "The Miracle Worker," to a popular television comedy series: writes here of a young actress' problem: which, curiously, seems to have skipped her completely, and tells how she avoided a brief, compulsory, "retirement."

By PATTY DUKE
(for Cynthia Lawry)

NEW YORK (AP)—I think the awkward age is just a state of mind. I don't believe that child actors need fear that dreadful, dark, never-never land somewhere on the other side of limbo where they are supposed to disappear while waiting to outgrow the awkward years.

Work and a positive attitude can help the young actor overcome his or her youth.

I'm very aware that waiting to mature can be the most tiresome and uninteresting time in the life of a young actor or actress. The main reason, aside from the fact that the individual may be changing physically, is that there are not many parts written for 14- to 18-year-olds. When a role does come along for a 16-year-old, they more than likely look for someone who is around 20 who can play down to 16.

However, I think an actor's attitude can make a big difference. The only example I can give is myself. When I was 16 I didn't feel particularly awkward nor did I feel that my career was going through a transitional stage. On the contrary, I felt that I was standing on the threshold of my career. All that was uppermost in my mind was to continue working and learning how to become a better actress.

So, instead of waiting for the right part to come along, my manager, Mr. John Ross, and I kept on the lookout for something worth doing. Thus when the opportunity for me to do a comedy series on television presented itself it seemed to us that here was the next logical step in my career. It was a challenge worth facing.

It turned out to be one of the most exciting years I have ever experienced. Of course, the fact that "The Patty Duke Show" was so well received by all our television friends added to my pleasure.

I've learned many things since Patty and Cathy Lane (my television alter egos)

"Serendipity": A New and Happy Event

"Serendipity" is becoming a household word owing to nine attractive, talented youngsters calling themselves "The Serendipity Singers." "Serendipity" means "the discovery of a new and happy event," and these bright nine are living up to their name! They have hit recordings on Philips, made top TV appearances, and are heavily booked for college concerts and night club dates. The Serendipity Singers were formed at the University of Colorado and unlike many passing fancy performers on the music scene today, they are prepared for their instant celebrity status and prepared for the future beyond it. Taking a firm stand against school drop-outs, each of the Serendipities, a college graduate, is prepared for another career should he or she exit show business.

Development Soon in River Program

By GORDON BROWN

WASHINGTON (AP) — There should be some development in the pending Arkansas River program appropriation soon after Congress returns to work July 20 after the recess for the Republican presidential convention.

The question, of course, is whether the program will get a sufficient appropriation to keep it on its present schedule which is aimed at completion of the navigation channel to Catoosa, Okla., in 1970.

Army Engineers have been pretty firm in saying they need $99 million to keep the job on schedule. President Johnson's budget recommended $84 million and the House earlier this year voted $89 million.

It's now up to a Senate appropriations subcommittee headed by Sen. Allen J. Ellender, D-La. Ellender is hopeful of completing his work on the bill the week of July 20. The full Senate appropriations committee generally accepts the decisions of Ellender and his group. Sen. John L. McClellan, D-Ark., who is a member of the Ellender subcommittee, is engaged in an effort to get the Army Engineers whatever sum they say they will need to keep the work on schedule.

His principal argument is that the cost increase for each year of delay is greater than the extra amount required to keep the work on schedule and that it is foolish economy to force a delay on a program now so far along.

What McClellan would like to have is a supplemental budget recommendation from the budget to vote for increases over the program for the Arkansas River program to the neighborhood of $97 million to $99 million.

While the Senate doesn't hesitate to vote for increases over budget recommendations, the House in the past has been a little stuffy on this point. Ellender has said there could be a problem with the House if the Senate hiked the amount to $99 million, without Budget Bureau support.

However, an alternate plan has been suggested.

It would involve a Budget Bureau recommendation for an amount $5 to $7 million above the House approved total. Then Army engineers could report back to Congress early next year on whether this amount would keep the project on

Board to Seek Millage Increase

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — The Pulaski County Rural School Board voted Tuesday to ask voters to approve a school tax increase of four mills to 55 mills in the September school election.

Supt. E. F. Dunn said the increase would provide about $200,000 to pay for building programs now under way.

Bids Taken on Reservoir Work

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Threw Shovel Co. of Lorain, Ohio, had the apparent low bid of $39,340 Tuesday to furnish a roadway crane for maintenance work at Beaver Reservoir.

The crane would be powered by gasoline engine, would have minimum rating of 25 tons and would be mounted on a truck, Army Engineers said.

Maiden Voter Ruling Made

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — The attorney general's office said Tuesday that a person who becomes 21 after April 10, 1963, can vote until Oct. 2, 1964, without a poll tax.

Union County Tax Collector Robert H. Keys of El Dorado sought the ruling.

If the engineers said the amount was sufficient, that would end it. But if they said they would fall behind without more money, then Congress could vote the additional fund.

Half the Arkansas Congressional delegation is spending the recess in the home state.

Reps. Oren Harris, Wilbur Mills and E. C. Gathings, Democrats, all took off last week and will remain in the state until about July 20. Two of them — Harris and Gathings — have primary contests on their hands.

Rep. J. W. Trimble, also a Democrat, said he might be able to get back to his district but thought it more likely he would postpone his trip until after Congress quits for the year, probably in August.

Sens. John L. McClellan and J. William Fulbright, Arkansas Democrats, both hoped to get away this week for brief vacations.

They, like other senators, were a bit weary after the long civil rights filibuster and hope to get in some sun and rest — and in the case of Fulbright — some golf during the 10-day Senate recess.

WICHITA, Kan. ## Wallace in Presidential Race to Stay

By LEE TALIAFERRO
Associated Press Writer

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace criticized the Democratic and Republican parties here Tuesday night and said he was in the race for president to stay.

Wallace, speaking at a rally sponsored by a pro-segregation group, said both political parties support the same platform and he urged 2,400 persons at the rally to support him.

"Together we can win the ballgame of power for the South," he said.

He announced that he was a firm candidate for president, but he indicated that his main interest was in getting a bloc of votes that could decide the presidential election.

In that manner, he said, he could swing the election to any candidate who would proclaim a state's rights platform acceptable to the South.

Wallace came here to kick off his unpledged electors campaign, but told newsmen before the rally that the campaign had a new twist: "I am seeking electors pledged to Gov. George Wallace of Alabama."

The bantam Alabamian expressed confidence in his ability to win votes and said he might run second in the presidential race.

"I could even be first," he added, laughing. But he was serious when he said, "we are going to win in the South."

Wallace predicted that his campaign would lead to a realignment of political thought. He said it already has both major parties concerned.

He said that after the November election one of the existing major parties may lose prominence and his conservative group will take its place, giving the "American people a clear choice."

The Alabama governor was highly critical of the U.S. Supreme Court, the civil rights law and the "liberal left-wing press." He predicted that the civil rights law would be repealed or revised within the next four years.

Either of the present parties could get Wallace's backing, he said, if the party adopted a state's rights platform acceptable to the South.

After his speech at the rally, newsmen asked Wallace if it would be compatible at the present for him to campaign for President Lyndon Johnson or Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz.

"Why don't you ask either of them if they would campaign for me," Wallace said. "I'm running for president just as they are."

Wallace was introduced at the rally by Gov. Orval E. Faubus, who criticized the Arkansas Gazette and then called Wallace a man "who, perhaps, is doing more than any other in America to keep open the door to liberty and freedom."

Shortly after Wallace began his speech, 32 pickets appeared outside the auditorium, carried signs, walked quietly, and then left. There was no trouble.

Wallace was frequently interrupted by applause. He received a standing ovation when Faubus introduced him. About 1,200 persons waited after the rally to shake Wallace's hand and to praise him.

He said he would return to Arkansas later for more campaigning. He returned to Alabama immediately after the speech, which was sponsored by the Capital Citizens Council.

Atty. Gen. Bruce Bennett has ruled that Wallace needs 46,217 signatures from qualified Arkansas voters to be a presidential candidate in Arkansas. Faubus said he thinks Wallace can get the necessary number of signatures.
